

Giving to ISA

ISA occupies a unique position at the core of academic study of the region in the UK. Internationally recognised as a centre of excellence for research and research facilitation, ISA also provides resources to the wider academic community, serving and strengthening national networks of North Americanist, Latin Americanist and Caribbeanist scholars. The Institute actively maintains and builds ties with cultural, diplomatic and business organisations with interests in the Americas and, as part of the School of Advanced Study within the University of London, benefits from academic opportunities, facilities and stimulation across and between a wide range of subject fields in the humanities and social sciences.

Donate to ISA and help us train the scholars of the future

It's now possible to make charitable donations to ISA to help us expand our role in the study of the Americas, both north and south. Your support can enable the Institute's students to undertake study and research that might otherwise have been impossible. We particularly focus on two areas:

- Bursaries for students with strong academic backgrounds who might otherwise be unable to study for financial reasons
- Fieldwork grants for students to conduct primary research in the Americas

Decisions to support students are made by a panel of academic staff of the Institute, on academic merit, to those in need. By contributing in this way, you will build on nearly half a century of our work studying the Americas, and support the next generation of researchers. Reports from the recipients of grants will be made available, demonstrating the impact and value of your donation in nurturing young scholars in the first stages of their careers.

Even small gifts can add up to make a real difference to a student's ability to study, so we welcome your contribution and thank you for your help.
